

Attention Car Stereo and Alarm Installers:

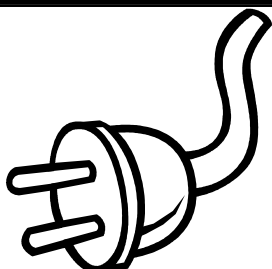

If you are installing, repairing, servicing or maintaining stereo equipment or a burglar alarm system for use in private motor vehicles, you must hold a valid registration issued by the Bureau of Electronic and Appliance Repair.

Locations serving only as drop-off points also must be registered, even if the installation, service or repairs are not performed on-site.

If you are not currently registered, contact the Bureau to learn how to become registered. It is important to become registered so that your business can serve customers legally. The Bureau generally does not penalize businesses who become registered immediately upon learning of the need for registration. Unregistered businesses are, however, subject to administrative fines and criminal penalties.

Your initial registration fee as an appliance or electronic repair dealer is $165. Annual renewal fees are also $165.

"Equipment" is defined as:

An electronic set, antenna, and accessories.

An "electronic set" includes, but is not limited to: Television, radio, audio or video playback equipment, video game, or video monitor.

"Antenna" includes, but is not limited to, devices used to capture electromagnetic energy transmitted by direct satellite or commercial radio or television broadcasting facilities.

Tip

Did you disconnect that vehicle battery before you started to remove the old equipment or install that new system?

The Bureau has received numerous complaints from consumers because the battery was not disconnected prior to work, and starters were destroyed and wiring harnesses were burnt beyond repair.
